Social Learning Theory Bandura Learning Theories Aug 23 2021 Sep 14 2020 Social learning theory theorized by Albert Bandura postulates that people learn from one another via observation, imitation, and modeling. The theory has often been called a bridge between behaviorist and cognitive learning theories because it encompasses attention, memory, and motivation.

Baddeley's Model of Working Memory Wikipedia Jan 28 2022 Baddeley's model of working memory is a model of human memory proposed by Alan Baddeley and Graham Hitch in 1974. This model is an attempt to present a more accurate model of primary memory. It is often referred to as short-term memory. Working memory splits primary memory into multiple components rather than considering it to be a single unified construct.

Political Question Doctrine LII Legal Information Institute Jul 10 2020 Central Leather Co. 1918. This is one of the earliest examples of the Supreme Court applying the political question doctrine to cases challenging foreign policies. The Court found that the conduct of foreign relations is the sole responsibility of the executive branch. The Court also found that cases which challenge the way in which the executive uses that power present a political question.

Unitary Executive Theory Wikipedia Nov 25 2021 The unitary executive theory is a theory of United States constitutional law which holds that the President of the United States possesses the power to control the entire Federal Executive Branch. The doctrine is rooted in Article Two of the United States Constitution, which vests the executive power of the United States in the President. Although that general principle is widely accepted, the doctrine has been used to limit the President's power in various cases.
